CASE STUDY

For cities and utilities in over 100 countries, Itron is leading innovative ways to intelligently manage energy and water. Itron is a solution-oriented grid edge leader for the Industrial Internet of Things (IIoT), which refers to the interconnectedness of instruments, meters, software, networks, and other supportive technologies.

At the forefront of tech-enabled progress, Itron recently prioritized web redevelopment efforts to maximize its brand's digital performance and scalability. Goals for the new website solutions included a transition to SaaS in a cloud-hosted asset environment.

Regionally unique websites were to be created, each with specific product catalogs, language options, and content priorities worldwide. The new multisite ecosystem would effectively create a portal experience for customers and accelerate performance within Itron's established regions, as well as efficiently empower further expansion.

Itron identified Liferay as its digital experience platform (DXP) of choice and partnered with Americaneagle.com to lead the replatforming, development, and implementation of the new website solutions. Liferay's unique combination of open-source versatility, intuitive content management interface, multi-site/multi-lingual scalability, integration capabilities, and overall performance as a cloud-based SaaS platform made it the ideal choice.

Portals were established to effectively represent Itron's dedication to localization and unique commitments to each region they serve. Fifteen websites were successfully launched for designated countries and regions across the Americas, Europe, the Middle East, Africa, Asia, and Pacific Islands.
